Glossary of Stone Finishes

antiqued A finish that replicates rusticated or distressed textures that is produced through mechanical or chemical means to simulate the naturally occurring effects of the aging process.

brushed A brushed surface has a finish that reveals unique characteristics of the stone. Veins, shells and denser elements of the stone become relief and the overall finish takes on a subtle sheen and a softer texture.

brush-hammered A surface that is produced by a mechanical process that varies from subtle to rough textures.

honed A satin-smooth surface finish without reflection.

polished A glossy, reflective surface that brings out the full color, depth and crystal structure of the stone.

sandblasted A matte-textured surface finish without gloss and finished by application of steady flow of sand and water under pressure.

tumbled A weathered, aging finish that is achieved when stone is tumbled with sand, pebbles or steel bearings.
